~ELVIS PRESLEY KINDNESS~

During an Elvis concert in 1975, he was told that a blind girl was in the audience who absolutely loved him. Elvis told his entourage to bring the little lady on stage, immediately. The little lady got on stage. Elvis knelt before her. Here is the conversation that followed:

Elvis: "I heard you enjoy my records..."

Little lady: "Yes, sir. I sure do. I listen to them every night before bed."

Elvis: "Really?"

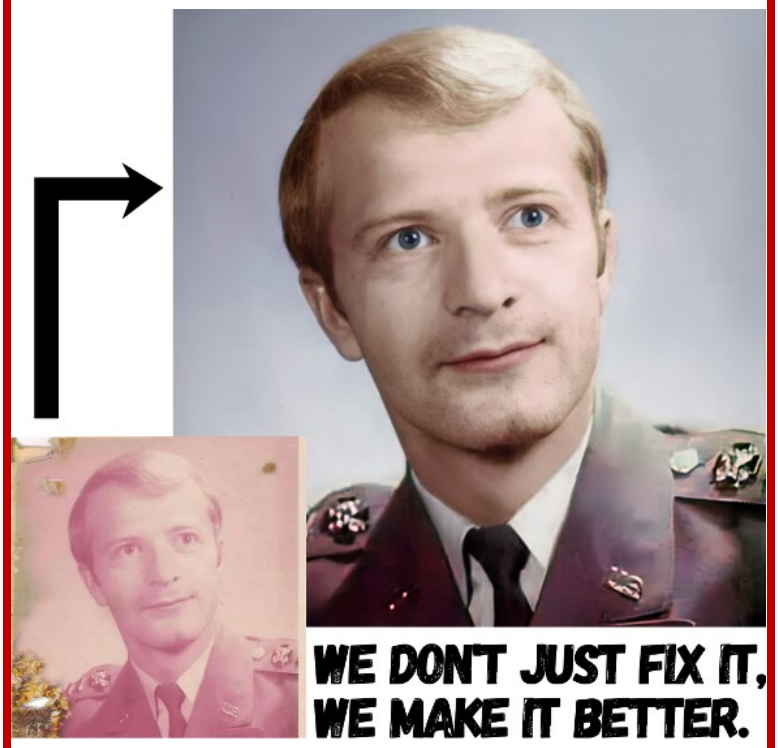

Little lady: "Yes, sir."

Elvis: "I've had a lot of accolades and awards - and a lot of great things said about me, little one, but none of that matters, because what I mean to you is the greatest feeling I have ever had in my life."

Little lady: "Really?"

Elvis: "Yes, little one."

Little lady: "Can I feel your face, because my mom says your really handsome."

Elvis: "Sure you can, but that would be a waste of time, because you have the most beautiful face I have ever seen. If you want to know what handsome or beautiful is, just feel your own face, little one."

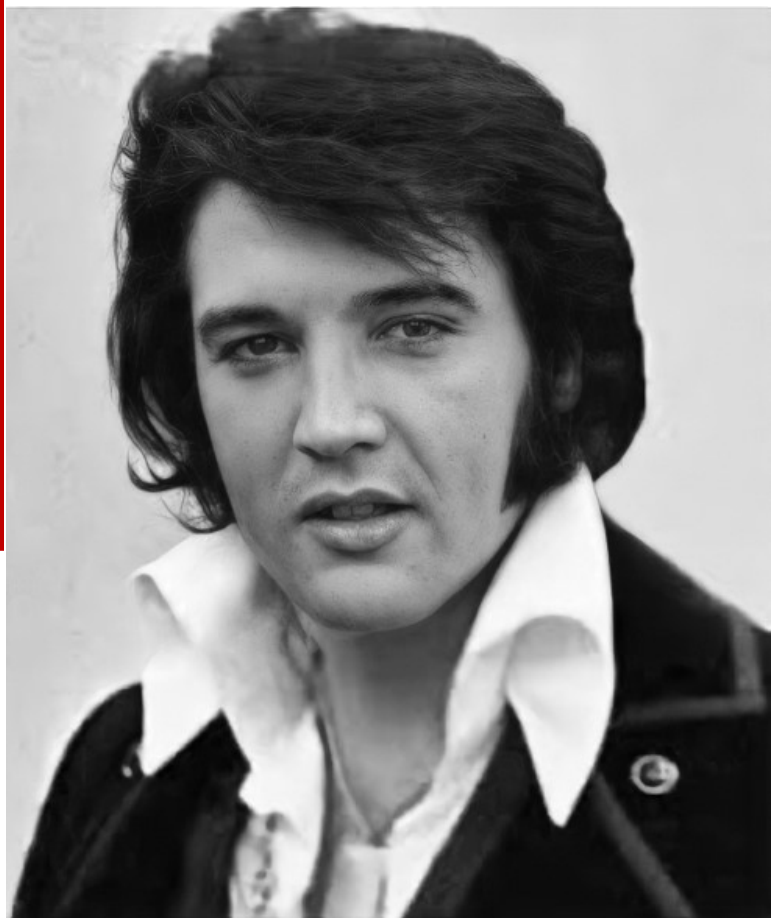

Little lady: "You mean that, Mr Elvis?"

Elvis: "Not only do I mean that, but I am hoping you'd give me your autograph, so I can cherish the moment I met the most beautiful girl that ever lived."

After that exchange, the little lady cried with happiness and joy. She left the stage - but didn't leave the heart of Elvis.

After the concert ended, Elvis told Joe Esposito, "No matter what her family needs, I am here. In fact, give them this check."

That check was for $50,000 - and a ticket to every concert Elvis would ever have in the future including cost of travel - and hotels!

Feelings are just feelings.

Feelings are not good or bad.

It's nothing to be ashamed of.

If you look at a glass of water and think it's half full—

That's positive.

If you look at a glass of water and think it's half empty–

That's negative.

The thing to remember is—that no matter how you look at it,

That glass has the same amount of water.

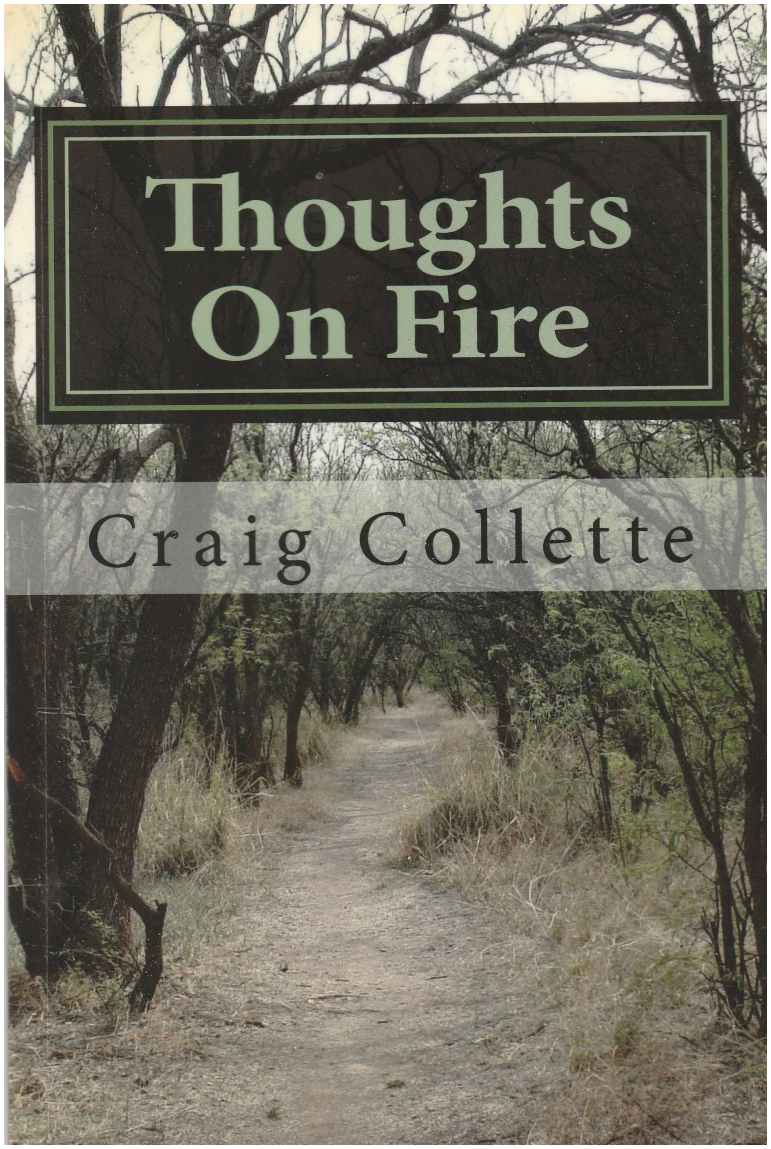

It's all in how you look at it.

You can control how you feel about things!

Life does happen!

People seem to be more happy when they think positive.

So Think Positive!

Leave A Man Alone With His Thoughts

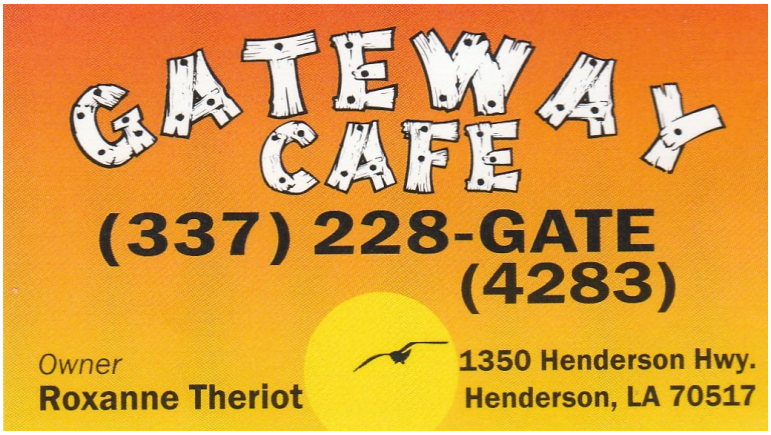

Leave a man alone
With his thoughts,
Leave them undisturbed.
For without knowing it,
You might upset one of his Greatest moments.
He may never
Win that race,
Write that song,
Reach that star,
Or discover love's mystery.
You just never know.
A man and his thoughts
Are precious these days
In a world which is so noisy
And so much of our thinking
Is done for us.
Don't disturb that man
Staring out into the dark of night,
Eyes glazed over
And fixed on eternity.
Paralyzed by the stars,
He's rendered temporarily, useless
To all but himself.
Involuntarily. suspended
In space and time,
He's in a place
That's his and his alone,
So
Leave a man alone
With his thoughts.

Actor Jimmy Stewart
What most people don't know

Months after winning his 1941 Academy Award for best actor in "The Philadelphia Story," Jimmy Stewart, one of the best-known actors of the day, left Hollywood and joined the US Army. He was the first big-name movie star to enlist in World War II.

An accomplished private pilot, the 33-year-old Hollywood icon became a US Army Air Force aviator, earning his 2nd Lieutenant commission in early 1942. With his celebrity status and huge popularity with the American public, he was assigned to starring in recruiting films, attending rallies, and training younger pilots.

Stewart, however, wasn't satisfied. He wanted to fly combat missions in Europe, not spend time in a stateside training command. By 1944, frustrated and feeling the war was passing him by, he asked his commanding officer to transfer him to a unit deploying to Europe. His request was reluctantly granted.

Stewart, now a Captain, was sent to England, where he spent the next 18 months flying B-24 Liberator bombers over Germany. Throughout his time overseas, the US Army Air Corps' top brass had tried to keep the popular movie star from flying over enemy territory. But Stewart would hear nothing of it.

Determined to lead by example, he bucked the system, assigning himself to every combat mission he could. By the end of the war he was one of the most respected and decorated pilots in his unit.

But his wartime service came at a high personal price.

In the final months of WWII he was grounded for being "flak happy," today called Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).

When he returned to the US in August 1945, Stewart was a changed man. He had lost so much weight that he looked sickly. He rarely slept, and when he did he had nightmares of planes exploding and men falling through the air screaming (in one mission alone his unit had lost 13 planes and 130 men, most of whom he knew personally).

He was depressed, couldn't focus, and refused to talk to anyone about his war experiences. His acting career was all but over.

As one of Stewart's biographers put it, "Every decision he made [during the war] was going to preserve life or cost lives. He took back to Hollywood all the stress that he had built up."

In 1946 he got his break. He took the role of George Bailey, the suicidal father in "It's a Wonderful Life." The rest is history.

Actors and crew of the set realized that in many of the disturbing scenes of George Bailey unraveling in front of his family, Stewart wasn't acting. His PTSD was being captured on film for potentially millions to see.

But despite Stewart's inner turmoil, making the movie was therapeutic for the combat veteran. He would go on to become one of the most accomplished and loved actors in American history.

When asked in 1941 why he wanted to leave his acting career to fly combat missions over Nazi Germany, he said, "This country's conscience is bigger than all the studios in Hollywood put together, and the time will come when we'll have to fight."

This holiday season, as many of us watch the classic Christmas film, "It's A Wonderful Life," it's also a fitting time to remember the sacrifices of Jimmy Stewart and all the men who gave up so much to serve their country during wartime. We will always remember you!

Postscript:

While fighting in Europe, Stewart's Oscar statue was proudly displayed in his father's Pennsylvania hardware store. Throughout his life, the beloved actor always said his father, a World War I veteran, was the person who had made the biggest impact on him.

Jimmy Stewart remained in the USAF Reserve following the war, retiring as a Brigadier General in 1968. He was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1985 and died in 1997 at the age of 89.

Last Lakota Code Talker Clarence Wolf Guts Dies at 86!

When the towers of the World Trade Center fell on Sept. 11, 2001, Clarence Wolf Guts asked his son to call the U.S. Department of Defense to see if the country needed his code talking abilities to find Osama Bin Laden.

Wolf Guts was in his late 70s at the time, so his son, Don Doyle, did not make the call, but said the request personified his father's love of country.

"He still wanted to help. He was trying to still be patriotic," Doyle said.

Clarence Wolf Guts

Wolf Guts, 86, the last surviving Oglala Lakota code talker, died Wednesday afternoon at the South Dakota State Veterans Home in Hot Springs.

A Native American code talker from World War II, Wolf Guts helped defeat Axis forces by transmitting strategic military messages in his native language, which the Japanese and Germans couldn't translate.

"He's the last surviving code talker from the whole (Lakota) nation. It's going to be a little like the passing of an era," Doyle said.

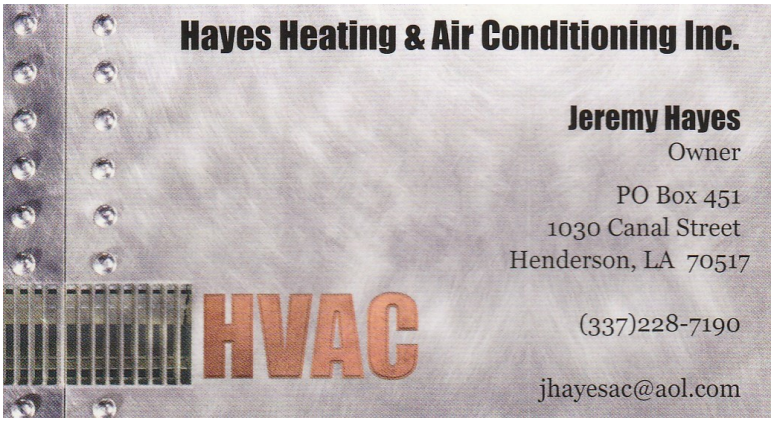

The 450 Navajo code talkers were the most famous group of Native American soldiers to radio messages from the battlefields, but 15 other tribes used their languages to aid the Allied efforts in World War II. Wolf Guts was one of 11 Lakota, Nakota and Dakota Native American code talkers from South Dakota. Wolf Guts, of Wamblee, enlisted in the U.S. Army on June 17, 1942, at age 18. While in basic training, a general asked Wolf Guts if he spoke Sioux. He explained the three dialects to the general and said he spoke Lakota. Wolf Guts helped develop a phonetic alphabet based on Lakota that was later used to develop a Lakota code.

He and three other Sioux code talkers joined the Pacific campaign; Wolf Guts' primary job was transmitting coded messages from a general to his chief of staff in the field.

Pfc. Wolf Guts was honorably discharged on Jan. 13, 1946, but the horrors of war followed him home and he turned to alcohol to forget, Doyle said.

"He tried to keep it all inside," Doyle said.

About a decade ago, Wolf Guts started to share his experiences as a code talker with his son and the public.

Doyle said his father's deeply religious way of life was also a part of the stories. He always thanked God for bringing him home.

With the sharing of his story came recognition of his service and honors, including national acknowledgement through the Code Talkers Recognition Act of 2008 championed by senators Tim Johnson, D-S.D., and John Thune, R-S.D.

Both senators honored Wolf Guts efforts and offered their sympathies on Thursday night.

"I am deeply saddened to hear about the passing of Clarence Wolf Guts. He and his fellow Code Talkers have had a lasting impact on the course of history and helped lead the Allies to success during World War II. He will be greatly missed, but his contributions to our state and nation will live on," said Johnson.

"Clarence Wolf Guts was an American hero; he was courageous and self-sacrificing. I have a great deal of respect for Clarence and for the extraordinary contributions Mr. Wolf Guts made to our country. The efforts of the Lakota Code Talkers saved the lives of many soldiers, and for too long went unrecognized. Kimberley and I wish to express our sympathy to his family during this difficult time," Thune said.

Doyle said his father was humbled by the recognition, but was proud of his service during the war. Wolf Guts' desire to help others continued throughout his life well after the war ended.

"He considered himself just a man, nobody important. A man that tried to make life better for his family and his people. To me that is his legacy, to be able to help people," Doyle said. "To him, that was being warrior."

the day.

Then - over the machine gun noise - you faintly hear that sound of a helicopter.

You look up to see a Huey coming in. But.. It doesn't seem real because no MedEvac markings are on it.

Captain Ed Freeman is coming in for you.

He's not MedEvac so it's not his job, but he heard the radio call and decided he's flying his Huey down into the machine gun fire anyway.

Even after the MedEvacs were ordered not to come. He's coming anyway.

And he drops it in and sits there in the machine gun fire, as they load 3 of you at a time on board.

Then he flies you up and out through the gunfire to the doctors and nurses and safety. And, he kept coming back!! 13 more times!!

Until all the wounded were out. No one knew until the mission was over that the Captain had been hit 4 times in the legs and left arm.

He took 29 of you and your buddies out that day. Some would not have made it without the Captain and his Huey.

Medal of Honor Recipient, Captain Ed Freeman, United States Army, died at the age of 81, in Boise, Idaho.

I bet you didn't hear about this hero's passing, Medal of Honor Winner Captain Ed Freeman.

Musicians of the Month

Sweet Cecilia

ABOUT US

The Grammy Nominated band, Sweet Cecilia, is a family trio from Cecilia, LA. Their music is deeply rooted in country, rock, folk, and Cajun influences. Their three part harmony is rich and sultry. These three women are not only accomplished vocalists, but musicians and master songwriters. Their original songs will invoke tears, laughter, and joy. Sweet Cecilia was formally created in 2012. However , sisters Laura Huval and Maegan Berard, along with their first cousin, Callie Guidry, have been singing and making music together since childhood. It all started with their late father and uncle, Al Berard (Grammy nominated musician) , encouraging them at a young age to pursue music. They keep the music fresh and modern, while holding on to their musical roots and traditions.

AWARDS AND RECOGNITION

The band, Sweet Cecilia, has been nominated for a Grammy Award in the Best Regional Roots Album Category for their album, A Tribute to Al Berard. The tribute album honors their late father and uncle, Albert "Pyook" Berard, a singer, songwriter, and Grammy-nominated musician from Cecilia, Louisiana.

Sweet Cecilia includes award-winning singers and songwriters Laura Berard Huval, Maegan Berard Rankin, and Callie Guidry. "We are thrilled about the Grammy nomination for our album, A Tribute to Al Berard," said Laura. "The album features original songs written by my father, who was a world-renowned musician and a pioneer of the Acadian/ Creole culture."

Guest musicians included Kyle Hebert, Adrian Huval, Dwayne Brasseaux, Keith Blanchard, Karleen Berard, Gary Usie, Shane Guidry, Ronnie Eades, and James Spells. It was produced by Tony Daigle and Sweet Cecilia. The album was recorded, mixed, and mastered by Tony Daigle at the Al Berard Recording Studio and Electric Comoland.

The album can be ordered online at www.sweetceciliagirls.com or on all streaming service websites. All proceeds from the album sales benefit the Al Berard Memorial Music Fund at Community Foundation of Acadiana (CFA). The Fund provides instruments to students, offers music scholarships to students of all ages, and supports community projects that support the arts and our cultural heritage.

The 63rd annual Grammy Awards will be held on Sunday, January 31, 2021, and will be broadcast on CBS.

Sweet Cecilia is making their presence known in the Americana and Regional Roots world. Sweet Cecilia won the OffBEAT MAGAZINE "Best of the Beat Awards 2017" for "Best Country/Folk/Singer-Songwriter Artist" and "Best Country/Folk/Singer-Songwriter Album" (Sing Me A Story). "Sing Me A

More history of the Atchafalaya Basin:

I had the pleasure of meeting Davis Patin while I was studying engineering at LSU. Out of curiosity one day, I ventured into a storage room in the basement of the Electrical Engineering building. I was attracted by the huge assortment of equipment stored there. While looking around, I encountered Davis Patin, the person responsible for equipment. He was a very friendly man and we quickly became friends. I would often stop by and chat with him during breaks between classes. What a surprise when I discovered he was a cousin of my grandmother!

Davis Patin grew up in the town of Atchafalaya, LA – a town that no longer exists. This picture shows the town of Atchafalaya. It was located on the west bank of the Atchafalaya River at the point where the railroad crossed near Butte LaRose. The town and the railroad are gone. But, if you are in the area and look closely, you can still see the location of the railroad. Many of the pilings are still there, sticking out of the water in the Henderson Swamp.

Because of the low land and the frequent floods, the town was built on pilings. There were elevated walkways between the buildings – sort of a Venice of the swamp! Notice the water cisterns behind each building. The town didn't have running water. Also notice the outhouses connected by elevated walkways behind each house.

After graduating from LSU, I no longer saw Davis Patin. After he retired, he suffered a serious illness. During his convalescence, he wrote a novel, Tooke's Love. He sent me an autographed copy of his novel. Sometime after that, I got word he had passed away.

A Salute to Corporal Carlton Stanley Chapman and the 761st Tank Battalion

Army Gunner Cpl. Carlton Chapman, of Giles County Virginia, poses in his M4 Sherman tank near Nancy, France, on November 5, 1944. Chapman served in the 761st Tank Battalion.

During 183 days of continuous combat, the 761st fought all over northern and central Europe, from the Battle of the Bulge at Tillet, France, to the Battle of the Rhine, eventually making it all the way to Austria. The Army awarded the unit with four campaign ribbons: Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe. In addition, the men received 11 Silver Stars, 69 Bronze Stars and about 300 Purple Hearts. In 1978, the 761st received a coveted Presidential Unit Citation.

Cpl. Chapman was honored with the Purple Heart for his service in France. Sadly he was killed in action on November 9, 1944 just four days after this photo was taken. He was 32 years old. Carlton lies in rest at the Lorraine American Cemetery and Memorial. Saint-Avold, Departement de la Moselle, Lorraine, France. Lest We Forget.

A Young Man in the Army

A young man in the army was constantly humiliated because he believed in God. One day, the Captain wanted to humiliate him in front of the army.

He called out to the young man and said: Young man come here, grab the key and go and park the Jeep in front. The young man replied:

“i can't drive!” The captain said, "Well, then ask your God for help!" Show us that He exists!

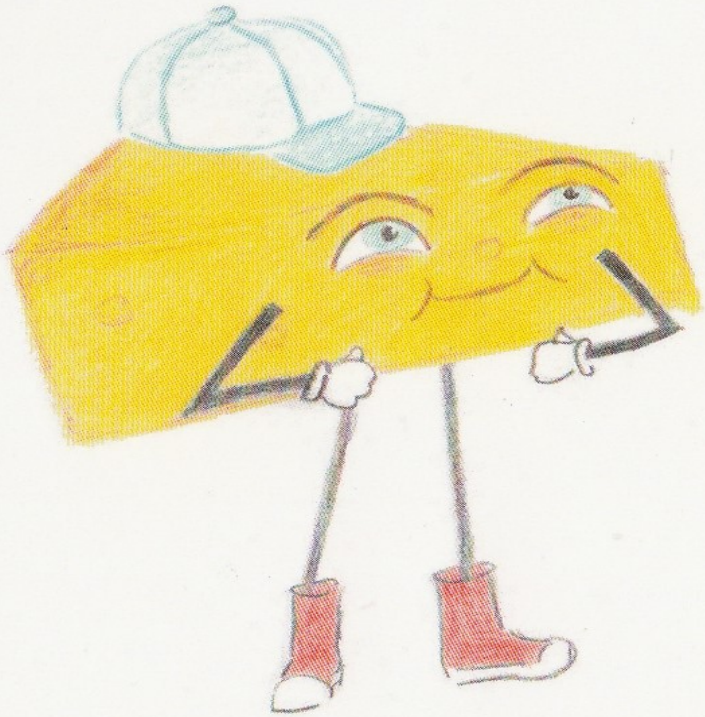

The young man took the key, went to the vehicle and began to pray ..... He parked the jeep in the spot perfectly, just as the captain wanted.

The young man came out of the jeep and saw them all crying. They all said together: - We want to serve your God! The youngest soldier was amazed and asked - what's going on? Crying the captain opened the lid of the jeep, showing it to the young man: the jeep had no engine!

Then the boy said, "Look?" This is the God I serve, the God of The impossible, the God who gives life to that which does not exist. You may think that there are impossible things, but with God everything is POSSIBLE.
